Does Anyone Else NOT Like Fairy-Types?

historyexamining1

I feel like they're a little OP, and I wish they just retconned the existing types to make Dragon-type weaker (I really would have like Dagon to be weak against Steel, so a knight and dragon thing).

I'll make a better debate in this post soon, I just wanted to make a thesis and ask everyone else.

I agree that the fairy type could be made to have one more (less drastic) weakness.
However, most fairy types aren’t very strong base-stat wise, some (like the competitive uses of Xerneas) just bug me. I wouldn’t cut them out completely? Some of the designs are really good looking, but my usual Goodra and Dark type related strategy does not do too well against fairy types, even though it works decently well against pretty much everything else.

@Ocean

I agree. Their base-stats are pretty weak. However, in Pokémon Ultra Moon, my well balenced team was wiped out by a Fairy-type Totem (Rimbombee) due to its darn Fairy-type not taking in any of my moves and then fainting the Pokémon that were strong against it. It took three times to beat it with my high level and trained team.

They made Dark and Bug very difficult to use now, and it makes me sad.

I do think Dragon-type's weakness to it doesn't make much sense logic-wise when compared to a Steel weakness. (Tinker Bell defeats Alduin (Plus there were fairy dragons in myths) compared to Saint George and the Dragon or Monster Hunter)

Also, I feel like they're slightly pandering towards girls in a stereoypical manner (Most of the Fairy-type's are "cutesy" and kind of weak), although there's quite a few more equal designs like Mawile and the Tapu's. While I don't mind cutesy or pink Pokémon (I like quite a few, including my Goodra), I don't like that Fairy-type is mainly that type of Pokémon, which makes me wonder if they're being targeted towards female players on that appearance.

(Also, maybe Dragon weak to Ground or Rock? Due to the myths of people defeating them with stone spears and stuff like that)

I like fairy types but it is weird how they have so few weaknesses especially when some other types have so many weaknesses that i see people saying the type as a whole is bad. also i keep thinking fairy is weak to fire but it's not, apparently

I also agree that Dragon-type needed a nerf, although I think it needed a different nerf. Cough Steel, Rock, or Ground But I do think if retconned Fairy-type could be useful, but with better base stats, a different type relationship, and a bit less OP resistance to everything.

After all, the Tapu Pokémon are awesome and I wouldn't like to lose them if it meant no Fairy-type, so I hope a retcon can be possible in the future on the Switch.

I do like Mimikyu (and I hope they do more that don't scream PINK)

Also I have a legit shiny Scolipede with the speed boost hidden ability but I can't use it much online because it gets destroyed fast. Actually, a lot of my good shinies aren't that useful in online matches, so I use water type most as a compromise.

~~Goodra is really versatile and I enjoy using its very varied move sets~~
~~Also YES TAPUS Koko is my favourite design, but strategically I use Fini or Bulu~~

Ahh, I know how you feel. Someone who was really toxic with me just made all their Pokémon Fairy-types to make me snap.

Mimikyu is awesome though, I really want to see what eldritch abomination is underneath though.

I feel like whatever's underneath that rag would just have OHKO moves with terrible accuracy, that'd be hilarious but super hard to fight

~~also have you seen the sturdy shedinja strategies~~

~~theyre 100% absurdly simple but unbeatable once they're in motion~~

In the Anime

Meowth sees the true form, and he dies for a minute. It's that terrifying!

~~I think I have, I'm a bit more of a catcher than a fighter though, although I do breed for high stats sometimes.~~

I've played a lot for years now, so I've got enough decent Pokémon to hold my own for the most part in the Battle Spot, but I am a one-trick pony there. I mostly just out-speed my opponent, and if they've got trick room, I'm done XD

~~I tried to Masuda method once but I gave up around egg 400 or so. Trying to get shiny minun to go with my shiny plusle, not to mention spina because that's a tough one to SOS~~
